Executive Summary

The U.S. Metropolitan Export Series published by the International Trade Administration (ITA) provides an important measurement of Florida's export activity at the local level. Since these data are based on the zip-code of the U.S. Principal Party in Interest (USPPI), or the person or company that benefits from the export sale, many wholesalers, distributors, freight forwarders, and logistics companies operating as the seller are thereby represented. Conversely, the MSA export statistics do not necessarily reflect the location of production or manufacture. As a result, this report takes more of a supply chain angle of Florida exports at the local level and provides key information about Florida's robust entrepôts.

In 2022, Florida's 22 MSAs accounted for $66.9 billion in exports, comprising 3.2% of all U.S. MSA exports, while another $815.5 million in exports originated in Florida's non-metropolitan areas, a 6.7% increase over 2021. Throughout 2022, 17 of Florida's 22 MSAs saw export growth; five MSAs in Florida experienced decline. Overall, Florida MSA Exports increased by 20.6% in 2022.

The Miami-Fort Lauderdale-West Palm Beach MSA accounted for 62% of all Florida exports. It was also one of two Florida MSAs, alongside Tampa, to rank as a top 50 MSA exporter in the entire U.S. (ranked 8th), with merchandise shipments totaling $41.5 billion. The Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater MSA accounted for 14.3% of all Florida exports. It ranked 41st among top exporting MSAs in the U.S., with merchandise shipments totaling $9.6 billion. The Tampa MSA experienced the highest annual growth among all Florida MSAs, increasing exports by 66.6% in 2022.

Regionally, Southeast Florida had by far the highest value of exports in 2022 with a combined total of $42.0 billion, an increase of 15.2% from 2021. The Tampa Bay and East Central regions ranked second and third with exports of $12.1 billion and $6.2 billion, respectively. The Tampa Bay region had the highest annual growth among all Florida regions, increasing exports by 57.1% in 2022. (Regions are defined by MSAs on pages 11 and 12.)

Florida's top sectors for products exported from Florida's MSAs on a 3-digit NAICS basis were computer and electronic products, transportation equipment, chemicals, machinery, and processed foods. Some of the main merchandise exports driving Florida's top three industries by MSA are: phones, computers, and electronic circuits; automobiles, aviation parts, and yachts; and medicaments, vaccines, and medical instruments.

Overview of U.S. Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) Exports

Notes on Disclosure of Export Data

For the 393 U.S. metro areas for which it is possible to release some export data, disclosure regulations still limit or prevent the release of much detail on foreign markets and the industry composition of exports. Manufactured product detail, even for the largest exporting metropolitan core-based statistical areas (CBSAs), is limited to broad, four-digit NAICS (North American Industry Classification System) categories. Information on market destinations, while generally more complete than data on product composition, is also subject to important disclosure-induced limitations. For additional product detail, it is recommended to contact the U.S. Census Bureau's International Trade Macro Analysis Branch as the data may be available for purchase.

Methodology

All state and metro area export values are derived from the U.S. Census Bureau's Origin of Movement-ZIP Code Based Series (OM-ZIP). This series, which the Census Bureau reintroduced in 2006, allocates exports to states and localities based on the address of the United States Principal Party in Interest (USPPI) of record.

The USPPI of record is not necessarily the entity that produced the merchandise; hence, the series does not furnish complete and reliable data on the production origin of U.S. exports. For a complete description of the methodology used by the International Trade Administration, please visit:

https://www.trade.gov/mas/ian/metroreport/tg_ian_002825.asp.

Metropolitan Statistical Area Exports vs. State of Origin Exports

The Metropolitan Export Series (OM-ZIP) is based on the zip code of the U.S. Principal Party in Interest (USPPI), which is the person or company that benefits from the export sale. This is different from the State Export Series (OM State), which is based on the state of origin of movement, that is, the state where the product began its journey toward the point of export or where shipments were consolidated. Therefore, as two separate data series, the accumulated total exports attributed to Florida should not be misinterpreted as being the same.

While one benefit of the zip code-based data is that it provides sub-state detail, the limitation is that the location of the USPPI may reflect more company headquarters of wholesalers and other non-manufacturing locations than the state of origin of movement data, which is more likely to reflect the state of manufacture or production.
